

DOMAINE LABRUYÈRE

LE CLOS DU MOULIN-À-VENT 2019

The 2019 wine-growing season was characterized by an exceptionally mild, very sunny and very dry winter, followed by a rather cool spring and a very contrasting summer, alternating between heat waves and cooler periods.

These conditions once again caused an early budburst and, and therefore the fear of a spring freeze was concerning.

As for the flowering phase, given the cool temperatures of May, it took some time to start, in early June but ended extremely quickly due to the heat of the end of the month. The high temperatures during the fruit set unfortunately caused important symptoms of sagging.

July was very sunny, hot and the rains were well enough distributed so that the vine did not suffer from drought.

August was cooler, the veraison was quite long to happen and to finish.

The harvest at Domaine Labruyère began on September 13th under ideal weather conditions. As the health state of the grapes was perfect, we simply had to wait for the right time to pick up at optimal maturity.
